What are digestive enzymes, and why are they so important?

We eat food, but our digestive system doesn't absorb food, it absorbs nutrients. Food has to be broken down into its nutrient pieces: amino acids (from proteins), fatty acids and cholesterol (from fats), and simple sugars (from carbohydrates), as well as vitamins, minerals, and a variety of other plant and animal compounds.

Atomy Finezyme, a Delicious Dessert!

Atomy Finezyme is a pineapple flavored dietary supplement with vitamin B1, pantothenic acid and biotin.

Vitamins and Coenzymes

Vitamins	Coenzymes	Functions
Thiamine (B1)	Thiamine diphosphate	Essential for carbohydrate and energy metabolism
Biotin (B7)	Biocytin	Essential for fat, carbohydrate, protein metabolism and energy
Pantothenic acid (B5)	CoA	Essential for fat, carbohydrate, protein metabolism and energy

Digestive enzymes, primarily produced in the pancreas and small intestine, break down our food into nutrients so that our bodies can absorb them.

If we don't have enough digestive enzymes, we can't break down our food—which means even though we're eating well; we aren't absorbing all the good nutrients.
